Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators : The War

Travis' career was interrupted by the draft during his peak season in 1941, a season for which he was the number one hitter of the American League. If there is one player who deserves to be in Baseball's Hall of Fame, it is Cecil Travis. He led the in in and his career of.

Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators : The War

Dave Kindred has been a sportswriter for more than thirty-five years. It is a very well written and researched story of a mostly forgotten gentleman baseball player who competed on the same fields with Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Bob Feller. Dave Kindred has been a sportswriter for more than thirty-five years.

When he returned to the game in 1945, after three and a half years in the army, Travis was no longer the dominant player he had been. Sent to Europe in late 1944 while serving in the , he suffered a severe case of frostbite during the , necessitating an operation to prevent amputation of his feet. Yet his prewar accomplishments were such that he finished his twelve-year career with a.
