Logistical restructuring and road freight traffic growth

Kosten-Deckungsgrad in Jahr 1987 und Vorschläge zur Realisierung des Verursacherprinzips. Manufacturers anticipate that their road freight demand will broadly increase in line with sales and be largely unaffected by road transport cost increases at the levels currently proposed. The paper concludes by examining their likely reactions to a much sharper increase in the cost of road freight movement.

Algeria Economic Monitor (Vol. 2) : Executive Summary

London: Transport Studies Group, University of Westminster. Changes in the frequency and scheduling of freight deliveries in response to tightening customer service requirements and just-in-time management appear to have become a more prevalent cause of freight traffic growth than the physical restructuring of logistical systems. The analysis of secondary data shows how, in the food and drink sector, the relationship between the real value of output and road vehicle-kms hinges on four key parameters: value density, handling factor, average length of haul and consignment size.
