Rapid Response Services

However, as layoffs do occur, inviting Rapid Response teams to meet with affected workers before the layoff will allow your employees to access services and programs that will help them through this difficult time. You may also wish to consider selling your business to a buyer, several buyers, a management group or employees.

Workforce Services for Businesses

Remember, early intervention is absolutely key for helping make this transition as smooth as possible for everyone involved. Developing relationships with your Rapid Response team can also benefit you during hiring phases as the team will have access to skilled workers looking for employment in your area. The WorkSmart Network and Workforce Development Board of South Central Wisconsin are service providers.

Transitional Assistance

The topics may all be presented during a single session or split amongst multiple sessions, depending on the circumstances. Sometimes they have to resort to a layoff of workers, or even business closure. Additionally, Rapid Response on-site meetings will introduce your workers to representatives of many other programs that can help them through this transition.

Transitional Assistance

With the help of SC Works and the S. Step 1: Notification The first step to obtaining assistance is to. Ask your Rapid Response team for information on Avoiding Layoffs Your state may offer incumbent worker training programs to help upgrade your workers' skills, employer loan programs to fund capital improvements, and many other services that may help prevent or minimize layoffs or even help your company grow.

Rapid Response Program

We can work one-on-one with displaced workers to discuss unemployment insurance benefits, job placement services and training options and we can help you coordinate with other services in your area. Your company, the Rapid Response team, or the workers themselves can file a trade petition with the U.
