School Improvement: Needs Assessment

It also offers additional resources and tools to help states move toward equity.

ERIC

Additional data analyses will be used to identify which of the previous interventions should or should not be continued and to determine if other evidence-based strategies are needed. A needs assessment is a procedure or process that identifies the perceived or expressed needs of a school district. It will also include an assessment of the leadership capacity at the school and district level.

ERIC

For schools identified for comprehensive support and improvement CSI , districts are required to work with school teams to conduct a school-level needs assessment.

School Improvement: Needs Assessment

Balancing these priorities is the best approach.

School Improvement: Needs Assessment

SEAs and districts are required to engage in timely and meaningful discussion with stakeholders during the needs assessment process, specifically principals and other school leaders, teachers, and parents; in addition, it is highly recommended that SEAs and districts engage with a wide range of other stakeholders appropriate to the local context, such as business or community leaders. This might include examples of data to examine or examples of completed school-level needs assessment summaries. Department of Education is done for purposes of information-sharing only and does not imply endorsement of any such information, products, or services by the U.
