Conservation and restoration of immovable cultural property

Of these, around 8 percent some 3,800 are Category A, and 50 percent are Category B, with the rest listed at Category C. Those built in the Norman era had high apsidal ends surrounded by a lower ambulatory, as is typical of Northern France. The late 16th and early 17th centuries saw repairs to the fabric of many cathedrals and some new building and stained glass as well as many new fittings.
