An examination of herd behavior in equity markets: An international perspective

The Truman administration was fearful that a war in Korea was a diversionary assault that would escalate to a general war in Europe once the United States committed in Korea.

Consumer behaviour

Latent Loyalty Characterised by high relative attitude and low repeat patronage. The impact of the Truman administration's defense budget cutbacks was now keenly felt, as US troops fought a series of costly rearguard actions.

UN ground forces, supply lines, and infrastructure were not attacked from the air and although North Korea had 75 airfields capable of supporting MiGs, after 1951 any serious effort to operate from them was abandoned, keeping them based across the Yalu River in the safety of China. Because the organization was not completed, only some of the folders contained information sheets and the file summaries were scattered throughout the collection.

Consumer behaviour

Yet mistrust and uncertainty about intentions lead one side to interpret the other's defensive measures as offensive—and therefore threatening.
