Parent

Parents, in turn, may lapse into speaking to adult children as though speaking to a child, making inappropriate demands or offering unsolicited advice. There are also differences by educational attainment: Parents with a college degree or higher 59% or those with some college experience 60% are more likely than those with a high school education or less 47% to say they spend too much time on their smartphones. Some parents and caregivers are surprised to learn that children can be harmed or die of measles, diphtheria, pertussis, and other vaccine-preventable diseases.

Positive relationships: parents & children

For parents of children under the age of 5 those shares are also notable: 48% and 55%, respectively.

Parenting Kids in the Age of Screens, Social Media and Digital Devices

And some parents with a child in this age range already believe their child spends too much time on certain devices, including a smartphone. Many parents find early adolescence a difficult period. Journal of Family Psychology, 23 1, 67-75.

For Parents and Children

Family routines and rituals are an important part of contemporary family life.

Parent Education Programs

Resources The following resources provide information on why clinical studies are important, how children might benefit from participation, and what you should think about before, during, and after joining a study.

How Parents Can Start to Reconcile with Estranged Kids

And since these are the criteria by which parents are judged today, parents are wise to pay attention to them if they seek a better relationship with their adult children.
