Young Contemporaries

The opportunity to take part in the exhibition, and to benefit from high profile technical and professional support, is incredibly popular, receiving approximately 1,600 submissions every year. The most famous Young Contemporaries show was that of 1961, when British Pop art first appeared in force in the work of Derek Boshier, David Hockney, Allen Jones, Ron Kitaj, and Peter Phillips, all students or former students at the. It put me out there and endorsed me and made me see my work in a different light.
