Series I, Rudge-Pound Correspondence, is housed in Boxes 1-32 and consists of the personal correspondence of Olga Rudge and Ezra Pound from 1923 to 1969. Their bodies were displayed in the in Milan, abused by the crowd, then left hanging upside down. Letters from the late 1930s contain information on the microfilming of Vivaldi manuscripts and the Vivaldi studies and performances sponsored by the Chigiana, as well as references to Rudge's publicity work and the Concerti Tigulliani.

The Economics of the Poet Ezra Pound: What Is Money For?

David Moody's three-volume Ezra Pound: Poet 2007—2015 combines biography with literary criticism. It became increasingly clear that Pound was schooling Kasper in the latter's pro-segregation activism. But his ideas garnered popularity, spurring on experiments in the Austrian village of Wörgl and in Alberta, Canada.
