Gadamer's Aesthetics (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Cesare and Grondin have argued that there is no trace of in Gadamer's work, and that Gadamer maintained friendships with Jews and provided shelter for nearly two years for the philosopher in 1933 and 1934. Gadamer has himself engaged, however, in more direct reflection on a range of contemporary issues see Gadamer 1976a, 1989a, 1993b, 1998b, 1999, 2001, see also Krajewski 2003. Showing an early interest in humanistic studies, Gadamer began university studies in Breslau in 1918 studying with Richard Hoenigswald, moving to Marburg with his father in 1919.
