Unspooling the Thread // Exploring African Music with Greg Nieuwsma

The little boy sings the song of Abiyoyo and the father makes the monster disappear. Sounds great in travel videos, adventure videos, sport videos, action scenes, background music, nature films, video games, documentary films, commercials, travel guides, advertisings, historic movies, heroic films, inspirational and motivational projects, cinematic trailers and teasers, presentations, movies, slideshows, slow motion and timelapse movies, tv, youtube, motion graphics, soundtracks, etc. Master kora players, or jalis, are a world apart from rock stars.

D.J. Thor

African-American influences are so fundamental to American music that there would be no American music without them.

Museum Exploring Music's Black Innovators Arrives in Nashville

The characteristics for this melody are very inspiring, feel good and work well with animal themes.

Exploring how African music uses instruments and tools

Uplifting African instrumentation creates a carefree and inspiring ethnic melody useful for travel, documentary and world themed projects. This track is great as a background for fast-paced video, tutorial video, vlog, sports, presentation, promo, games, intro, logo and other projects.
