Ancient Near East: Cradle of Civilization

However, the second millennium in Egypt followed upon a roughly two-hundred year collapse in royal power, which destroyed the centralized structure and organization that had defined the previous era. If this is the case, writers might have been describing ideal mythologized Eastern gardens or a famous garden built by the Assyrian king Sennacherib 704—681 BCE at Nineveh roughly a century earlier. However, even early palaces were very large and ornately decorated to distinguish themselves from domestic architecture.

Neolithic Art in the Ancient Near East

In a comprehensive introduction, Vladimir Lukonin, Director of the Oriental Art section of the Hermitage Museum, and his colleague Anatoli Ivanov have broadly documented the major developments of Persian Art: from the first signs of civilisation on the plains of Iran around the 10th century BCE through the early 20th century. The large-scale irrigation systems and labor required for extensive farming was managed by a centralized authority. It was not until the Neo-Assyrian Empire that Nineveh experienced a considerable architectural expansion.
