

Gifts for the living - conversations with caregivers on death and dying

Borgo Press - Challenges Faced by Caregivers During the Dying Process

Description: -

-

Caregivers.

Helping behavior.

Terminal care -- Psychological aspects.

Death -- Psychological aspects. Gifts for the living - conversations with caregivers on death and dying

- Gifts for the living - conversations with caregivers on death and dying

Notes: Reprint. Originally published: Santa Monica, Calif. : IBS Press, c1988.

This edition was published in 1989

Filesize: 10.34 MB

Tags: #The #Emotional #Challenges #of #End

perssongroup.materialsproject.org —

If some animals attack when they smell, maybe the same is true with difficult parents who attack when they smell. In this moving and compassionate book, hospice nurses Maggie Callanan and Patricia Kelley share their intimate experiences with patients at the end of life, drawn from more than twenty years experience tending the terminally ill.

perssongroup.materialsproject.org —

He is also very angry and sometimes speaks harshly to me.

INELDA

Every emotion I hear from you sounds completely normal, including the anger and aggravation.

Death and Dying

She will get better care in a facility set up for this.

Talking about death and dying

In general, a person who is at end-of-life will often sleep more, eat and drink less, become more withdrawn, and communicate less during the final one to three months before death. Perhaps due to weaker blood flow, muscles generally decrease in strength, size, flexibility, and endurance.

Related Books

- Miss Lonelyhearts & The day of the locust
- Shakespeares theatrical notation - the early tragedies
- Vachers parliamentary companion.
- Al treilea discurs - cultură, ideologie și politică în România
- John Donne