Bearing this in mind, this publication includes a comprehensive survey of local personal-information protection laws from the prefectural level down, with more detailed coverage of noteworthy provisions adopted at both the prefectural and municipal levels. Catalogue Persistent Identifier APA Citation Uga, Katsuya. The most distinctive characteristic of the legal system for the protection of personal information in Japan is the way in which authority in this area is decentralized.

A salient feature of this publication is the way in which it does not limit its discussion to simply explaining the relevant legal texts but rather expands its coverage to include international trends in personal information protection law, the history of how a legal framework for the protection of personal information was put in place in Japan, the major judicial precedents, reports of the Information Disclosure and Personal Information Protection Review Board, and particular local ordinances on the protection of personal information.

Zukai yoku waku Kojin jōhō hogohō to puraibashī māku (2005 edition)

This publication undertakes a detailed commentary of both the Act on the Protection of Personal Information and the Act on the Protection of Personal Information Held by Administrative Organs. However, discussion of the Act on the Protection of Personal Information Held by Independent Administrative Agencies concentrates on the points in which it differs from the Act on the Protection of Personal Information Held by Administrative Organs on the grounds that a thorough understanding of the latter will afford the reader a good grasp of the former. The discussion of judicial precedents also includes examples involving local ordinances on the protection of personal information.

It is hoped that the creativity and imagination shown by these local public bodies will in turn offer numerous pointers for thinking through the need for reform of the laws currently adopted at both the prefectural and municipal levels.
