This chronicle is written from the Indian point of view, and it follows history as it was made after the white man began the conquest of the Indians. Establishing claims to land required a method of surveying and recording the land. Trends in the settlement of the contiguous areas of the country indicate three periods of population settlement—1790 to 1840, 1840 to 1910, and 1910 to 1990.
