CROSSWINDS: The Air Force's Setup in Vietnam by Earl H. Tilford Jr.

Copyright 1993 Reed Business Information, Inc. Tackling the issues of the air war, he traces the doctrine of strategic bombing from its roots in World War II through its development in the 1950s and early 1960s as a response to the Soviet threat abroad and interservice rivalries at home.

His controversial thesis is that the bombing of the North and the interdiction campaign against the Ho Chi Minh Trail were in no way decisive and that USAF leadership obtusely failed to perceive that North Vietnam, an agricultural nation, was simply not susceptible to strategic bombing.

Crosswinds: The Air Force's Setup in Vietnam

His conclusions for why air power failed to achieve victory in Vietnam offer today's reader considerable food for thought, especially in light of air power's apparent decisiveness in Desert Storm.

His goal was to earn the right to choose the choicest flying assignment, which for him was flying the RF-4C.
