When they reached the a river that runs between Texas and Mexico at the end of 1535, Castillo and Estevanico headed upstream, where they came upon the permanent towns pueblos of the Jumano tribe. Besides these other reasons, they thought it was hard of him to ask them for turquoises and women, and so they decided to kill him. Columbus's arrival in the new world was proceeded by the explorer Leif Ericson and others.

Columbus' Confusion About the New World

In 1680, after eighty-two years of Spanish occupation, the Pueblo revolutionary leader Popé c. Legend has it that on the morning of September 25, 1513, Balboa and his dog climbed a peak and looked out over a vast ocean. The four Europeans were not allowed to stay together, so before parting they planned to meet in September 1534 at the annual Native American festival that celebrated the harvest of prickly pears.
