Axe the myths about native American tomahawks

Each is handmade; the glass beading and finish are unique. Click on numbers below image for additional views. The head is just over 4 inches in length, the handle is just over 18 inches long and the horse hair hangs down another 4+ inches.

Native American Tomahawks

The red paint lines and the scalp locks horsehair denote battles won. Native American tomahawks were in the possession of most Indians, and each individual decorated his own to suit his personal taste.

American Indian tomahawks : Peterson, Harold Leslie, 1922

It is the weapon that, alongside the bow, most people most closely associate with Native American warriors.

Tomahawks, Spears, Knives and other Native American Weapons

Fort Tumbleweed and fortumbleweed are trademarks of Leonard Kubiak. Each is handmade, the glass seed beading and finish is unique. Perhaps the owner of native American tomahawks would also clip a little hair from the mane or tail off his pony and affix it to his tomahawk.
