Then add to the above mixture, thirty-third part of flaxseed oil, which when well mixed with it, will form a rich milky substance, resembling thick cream. JOHN KLEIN A weaver named Klein, Kline, or Cline, lived in Noblesville, Hamilton County, in 1861.

Eliza Calvert Hall, Book of Hand

The ground is composed of a triangle design. The preparation of the wool was fully as elaborate as that of the flax, for it involved shearing, washing, picking, carding, spinning, and dyeing, all in preparation for the weaving. A coverlet made by Henry Adolf and Peter Lorenz, of Wayne County, is owned by Edward Hatfield, of Brookville, Indiana.

Woven Coverlet With Masonic Emblems.

He lived on East Broad Street, also on the Boone Highway, or Haguewood farm, two miles northeast of town.

Woven Coverlets, An American Story

Perhaps half the charm of coverlet study comes from the fact that in it one reads so much of the story of the Indiana pioneer.

Historic Weaving

We cannot say who the weaver was; there are only two known female fancy weavers, so this was probably made for Elizabeth Miller. No attempt was made in these houses to dress the stone, which was laid up in a rough but artistic wall, often two feet thick, with large stone chimneys and fire places as large as a modern kitchenette, a fortress for defence and an advance in architecture over the log cabin.
