Ching

Some claim that had been taught to the Shaolin monks by Ji Longfeng's line, while others hold the view that Ji Longfeng was taught martial arts by the monks. Founder of the school in 1960s Taiwan. Many martial arts lines, notably that of Chen style from Chen village, have begun to practice the Zhan Zhuang posture known as Hun Yuan Zhuang or Cheng Bao Zhuang in recent decades.

Ching

Contrary to popular belief, spread by some Taiwanese teachers, the art had not 'died out' on the mainland, but was simply inaccessible to outsiders for several decades proof of this is that many lineages of the art discussed and referenced on this page had survived and The Cultural Revolution. This branch became the most popular because Taiwan was open to Westerners during the 20th century, while throughout much of that century, the Communist regime on mainland China did not allow Westerners to visit regularly, and thus people were not exposed to branches of the art from the mainland.
