History of tuberculosis

The census of Oregon in 1860 reports a population of 52,465 with 300 deaths. In 1919 construction of Pavilion Butler brought the bed count up to 105, and construction of Pavilion C in 1923 made 150 beds available.

History of Tuberculosis (TB)

In 1963, the State Legislature combined the Oregon State Tuberculosis Hospital in Salem with the University of Oregon Medical School State Tuberculosis Hospital. TB camps in the desert were formed by pitching tents and building cabins. On November 21, 1910 the first five patients were admitted to the fifty-bed Oregon State Tuberculosis Hospital.
