We know that this is always subject to change, and we are actively monitoring the evolving situation: we will adjust our plans as necessary to ensure the health and well-being of the conference attendees, and we will promptly communicate updates and changes as soon as they are available. Are these temporary changes or is this the start of something new? We will discuss the follow-up to the conference and invite NEA members who participate to share their thoughts and progress. Additionally, a mechanism of written participation and commentary during the different planning phases is available to the full community, and is linked. Financial aid awards will be determined by the Alliance for Higher Education in Prison Advisory Board and Team.

Working to effectively communicate with adjunct members on campus is a priority for all locals, but creating strategies to successfully engage these members takes time and practice. This workshop will give best practices for self-care for BIPOC leaders who are often disproportionately called upon to represent BIPOC students, colleagues, and their institutions regarding racial and social justice issues. We will solicit your suggestions, ideas, and feedback through multiple open discussions on topics such as the conference theme, keynote speakers, special events, etc.
