Lalit Kala Akademi

The acclaimed art-critic emerged as one of the most vehement critics of the Triennale as she recognised their narrow economism as an extension of the international art exhibitions with vested commercial interests of commercial art dealers operating at the behest of both public and private, individual and national agents.

Lalit Kala Akademi

They were seen as events that widened the scope of the Triennale and formed the basis of a national cultural festival that could embrace the arts.

There were only a few phases when the artists were directly involved. In adherence to this idea of nationalism in modern Indian art, the Minister of Education set up the Lalit Kala Akademi so that the state could carry forward the cultural renaissance in India and patronise art with an impact and reach across the country.

Lalit Kala Akademi

Beginning with the establishment of eight studios at Bistidari Malcha Mahal in New Delhi, it was expanded to thirty six studios — including thirty two individual studios and four community studios. It began at a point in time when the purposed of such international exhibitions in the west was already being questioned.

After being charged with misappropriation of funds in mid-2017, the ministry instituted a three-member inquiry committee to probe the allegations.

In March 1977, the Triennale Committee declared that a strong Indian section could only be presented if the Triennale was not treated as a ground for exploring new talent, something that the NEA could take care of. Souvenirs were made by these studios for foreign dignitaries and its grounds were used to host meetings, camps, on-the-spot workshops, and displays.
