11.4 Strategies for Gathering Reliable Information

Denying the Hawthorne-Stanley interest-sensitive view of knowledge is, of course, one easy way to resist this sort of counterexample. From a No-Defeater Condition to Positive-Reason-to-Believe Condition Most testimonial liberals include a defeater condition on testimonially-based knowledge or justification. One way of answering the J-question is as follows: perceptual experiences are a source of justification only when, and only because, we have justification for taking them to be reliable.

Still, in lifting the restriction, the danger it sought to avoid returns. By contrast, a drawing of the two persons in a similar scene has the non-natural meaning of their illicit meeting, dependent on the intentions of the artists. Using Testimony

But must the reductionist endorse the articulation and accessibility requirement? Several authors give a relatively simple answer to the environmental condition: T must, himself, know that p.

Epistemology (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Some philosophers reject the Gettier problem altogether: they reject the aspiration to understand knowledge by trying to add to JTB. Almanacs, encyclopedias, atlases, medical reference books, and scientific abstracts are examples of reference works.
