The greatest monument in Bijapur is the , the mausoleum of Muhammad Adil Shah, which was completed in 1656, and whose hemispherical dome measures 44 metres 144 ft across. The interior also offers artefacts and Archaeological Survey of India plaques about Tipu Sultan and the palace, making it the most informative monument to visit in the area. Completely overhauled and reconstructed later by Alauddin Bahmani, it is an engineering feat of its time, with a 50 foot-thick double wall, the inner one higher than the outer.

Monuments and Forts of the Deccan Sultanate

One can then stroll along the Godavari Ghats and observe different Hindu rituals being performed at the Ghat, before wandering the market. The Jami Masjid 1615 in Khirki and the Chini Mahal inside the Daulatabad fort were constructed during the late Nizam Shahi period 1600—1636. The construction material used for all monuments is primarily stone and lime with stucco and retained with minimal intervention for restoration in matching materials.
