Progress in Mental Health

This has grave implications, as the communities bearing the heaviest mental health burdens are the communities that face the steepest barriers to accessing equitable mental health treatment and support. The Harm Stigmas Cause To Those With Mental Illnesses People with mental health conditions often have to live behind a veil of negative stigmas and hurtful perceptions from society. Our practice-based research demonstrates that clients in treatment at MHS show clinically significant improvement in their reported symptoms, including depression, anxiety, and substance use, and that clients with a history of mental health hospitalizations have significantly fewer hospitalizations and significantly fewer days in the hospital when they are hospitalized.

Mental health care picture is brightening, but progress remains far too slow

Preventative Services Task Force recommended doctors require. It has been calculated that one among every nine girls aged six now will enter a mental hospital at some time of her life; and so will one among every fourteen six-year-old boys. Sadly, many who face discrimination never see justice.
