Qur'an 7:172

. In the absence of dated texts of the ijāza in question, however, our theories as to the periods when Sayyid Kāzīm studied under them must remain conjectural, 100 although the dates of the deaths of Sayyid 'Abd Allāh and Shaykh Mūsā do at least provide us with termini ad quem for his study under them. The willingness of the Shaykh to stay in Kirmanshah and the subsequent length of his sojourn there also suggest a previous decision to accept a formal invitation from the prince.

Qur'an 24:6

On the other hand, a risāla on akl wa ma'kūl addressed to this prince is recorded as having been written at an unspecified date by Rashī.

Philosophy in Qajar Iran

It is often described as a specifically Shī'ī practice, but taqiyya is allowed in Sunnism too. Although less illustrious than his father or brother and disinclined either to write or to hold classes,<sup>564</sup> Sayyid Muḥammad Mahdī possessed some degree of prestige in Karbala by association with them, and, as, we have seen, was probably the first individual there to declare takfīr against al-Aḥsa'ī.
