Is technology dehumanizing us?

Somewhere in the transition between the two, the hominid, the first humanlike species, emerges. It's not the egregious bias anymore, but it's modern bias, subtle bias. Many Darwinists in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries came to believe—as Galton and Darwin also did—that many human character traits, such as loyalty, thrift, and diligence or on the negative side—deceit and laziness, were biologically innate, not malleable moral traits, as most Europeans had previously thought.

Is Technology Dehumanizing Society?

However, it is not in a conscious and therefore transhumanistic way.

AI and the Dehumanization of Man

Alexander Solzhenitsyn clearly depicted the Soviet problem with altering human nature in his novel, One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich.

Fahrenheit 451 Quotes: Technology

B knowledge; gnosis is contrasted with doxa opinion by Plato; the object of gnosis is to on, reality or being, and the fully real is the fully knowable Rep.

Dehumanization of society because of technology advancement

What difference is there if one is made of silicon and copper, and the other carbon-based? Isaac Newton and Einstein believed in God and Newton in particular took an immense interest in religion. The reciprocity of relations between man and society was well recognized by Gandhi.

Transhumanism

But, with cell phones comes texting, an inhuman way of communication.
