Then came the starboard machine's turn. The only RAF losses were a incident when an RAF Tornado jet was shot down by a US missile killing both pilot and Weapons Systems Operator due to the Patriot missile mistakenly recognising the Tornado as a Mig, and a Hercules transport plane shot down by ground fire killing the ten personnel on board just after takeoff from the US controlled airfield. The worst attack came on 31 May 1941 when four German bombs fell on North Dublin in the North Strand area, killing at least 28 some reports say 34 people.

Operational history of the Luftwaffe (1939

After Black Week, Eaker called off further penetrations and pondered his dilemma. Among the decisions taken immediately on the formation of M. Operation Overlord, the maneuver to land troops on the beach, is the largest amphibious invasion of all time.

It took me twenty to come down.

RAF raid on La Caine (1944)

All --164-- THE AIR DEFENCES OF ENGLAND AND WALES, AUGUST 1940 the five radar stations attacked were damaged, Manston airfield was put out of action, and at Lympne and Hawkinge take-off and landing had to be confined to very narrow strips. Flying Officers McElhaw and Hully, also of 32 Squadron, took over the standing patrol before the third wave of Egyptian Spitfires arrived. The aircraft carried inert concrete-filled 230-kg training bombs.

Air War from 1939

Since the immediate additions to the gun defences could be so few, Dowding had to find some other answer to the problem of close protection. By the end of May priority 1A was given to all fighters and bombers.

RAF raid on La Caine (1944)

This element had already been stressed by Winston Churchill in an eloquent prophecy before the battle opened; 'The great French Army was very largely, for the time being, cast aside and destroyed by the onrush of a few thousands of armoured vehicles. Low-level operations also reduced the lifespan of the Victors and Vulcans. There were about twelve Me.
