Constantinople, Palace mosaics

It stood on a steeply sloping hillside that descends nearly 33 metres 108 ft from the Hippodrome to the shoreline, which necessitated the construction of large substructures and vaults. These consisted of gold and silver coins, luxuriant raiment, silver beakers, golden Thersiclean vessels, linens of the finest weave, and other choice ornaments which were easily procured by the Romans but rare among the barbarians and hardly ever seen by them. A seaward gate gave direct access to the imperial harbour of Bucoleon.
