Why did the No

This means that students may decide themselves which subjects they complete, when, and in which particular order. Adjusting to the requirements of globalization, a semester-based training has been introduced instead of the traditional academic year, while — to make global comparisons easier — the ranking of Indian higher education institutions has begun.

The Dalits of India: education and development

In the course of the 1920s, the British created several central institutions to oversee education in the various states, the relevance of which increased after India gained independence. Also funding is needed to be spend on building infrastructure 4.

Privatized Rights, Segregated Childhoods: A Critical Analysis of Neoliberal Education Policy in India

On the elementary level, primarily rural schools struggle with serious infrastructural shortcomings. Research Interests: Financing education; education administration and planning; education of working children; globalisation and education policy.

Working paper

Costly higher education Very minimal amount of subsidy is provided for higher education so if student seeks to get chances of higher education still he misses out because of lack of economical resources 8. Teachers and parents also emphasised that exams induce fear and stress.

Why did the No

Too much pressure on them First generation school-goers undergo a lot of pressure as their family has a lot of expectations from them. The study aims to fill some of the major gaps in our existing knowledge about young children in India.
