Jeremy Bentham

Here, we outline policies that governments and users of these refrigerants can adopt to minimize their emissions. Those concerns should be addressed by 1 insisting on a fully independent judicial role in deciding whether a statute is ambiguous at Step One; 2 invalidating arbitrary or unreasonable agency interpretations at Step Two; and 3 deploying canons of construction, including those that are designed to serve nondelegation functions and thus to cabin executive authority. If every voter received a voucher for this purpose, then public funds might crowd out private capital, thus alleviating its harmful effects.
