the determination that the South African authorities had met all five conditions set forth in the US Comprehensive Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986.

Press Releases

The primary subject in question was the handling of South African Indians, a critical cause of hostility between South Africa and India. This year marks the formal beginning of apartheid, though its foundations had been established through discriminatory legislation decades before. In 1980, they formed the SADCC, the aim of which was to promote economic development in the region and hence reduce dependence on South Africa.

The United Nations against Apartheid

In 1967, Vorster proffered technological and fiscal counsel gratis to any African state prepared to receive it, asserting that absolutely no political strings were attached. SANCTIONS ON SOUTH AFRICA THE RESULTS ARE IN I INTRODUCTION The first results of Western economic and political sanctions against the government of South Africa are in: Apartheid's supporters have been strengthened while those seeking reforms have been weakened. The programme had begun in 1974 because of the Government's sense of isolation and fear of communism in the region.

Foreign relations of South Africa during apartheid

Internal dissent had been crushed by 1964, and Frelimo launched a guerrilla war against targets in northern Mozambique, claiming to have established its own administrative, educational, and economic networks in the northern districts.

Foreign relations of South Africa during apartheid

The first Europeans arrived in South Africa in 1652 under the auspices of the Dutch East India Company to set up a station for passing ships at the Cape of Good Hope. Queen Elizabeth II at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting 1985, held in Nassau, the Bahamas, 16 October 1985. Anger over this policy and others led in 1976 to the Soweto Rebellion, during which police shot hundreds of protesting school children.

The Anti

It rejected South Africa's contention that the matter was within the domestic jurisdiction of South Africa and that the United Nations was not competent to consider the matter.
