Improving the Quality of Geriatric Nursing Care: Enduring Outcomes From the Geriatric Nursing Education Consortium

I could not agree with you more and am encouraged to find that young scholars are investigating diverse minority populations and addressing the gap that you so ably point out.

Strategies for increasing gerontology content in nursing education (1990 edition)

The second author reviewed each paper and data was coded to describe the main teaching methods.

Issues Affecting the Health of Older Citizens: Meeting the Challenge

Discussion and implications The inadequate preparation of nurses and nursing students in the care of older adults means there are opportunities to enhance knowledge about health and nursing care in lower and middle-income countries and build on the positive attitudes towards older adults. Given the heterogeneity of the educational methods, we used a thematic analysis approach to collate, summarize, and map the literature to identify themes across the retrieved studies based on the similarities of concepts and teaching techniques that educators had used.

10 Strategies to Improve Nursing Students' Learning

The participants' experiences indicate numerous problems in nursing education including problems related to students, educators, and clinical environments.

Gerontological Nursing: Developing the Art and Science

It is estimated that by 2040, almost 160 million people in the US, most of them elderly, will be living with chronic conditions. The extracted codes and results were retrieved and shared with the participants to validate the congruency of the codes with their experiences.

Issues Affecting the Health of Older Citizens: Meeting the Challenge

Authors through thematic analysis and group discussion found that manikins are an effective procedure for increasing SE.
