It consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower at the south-west angle. In the west window of the south aisle, is the next ancient monument; but from the porous nature of the stone, and its extreme dilapidation, a perfect restoration of this was prevented; it is supposed to be the effigy of William de Birmingham, a man of great repute in the time of the Second and Third Edward. Certainly reparation was made to Atherstone after the battle and not to Market Bosworth.
