Casanova l'admirable : Sollers, Philippe, 1936

Privacy gives a woman permission to be herself. By admiring those of Casanova's admirable qualities present in himself, Sollers spurns bourgeois hypocrisy and cliché to affirm a jocund philosophy of life devoted to the twinned pursuits of pleasure and joy. Il hante les imaginations, mais il les inquiète.

Marrying for love was rare. In fact, he believed that without engaging conversation, physical pleasure was uninteresting. He never quite made the connection himself, at least consciously, but he was driven by an emptiness that drove him to seek relief and release with almost any woman in his sphere - servants, aristocrats, and everything in between.
