Tottel's Miscellany: Songs and Sonnets of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, Sir Thomas Wyatt and Others (Penguin Classics) by Richard Tottel

Yet by the stroke of this strange ouerthrow, At which conflict in thralldom I was thrust: The Lord be praised: I am well taught to know From whence man came, and eke whereto he must: And by the way vpon how feble force His terme doth stand, till death doth end his course. However, from the sections I had to read for class, it was downright terrible. Readers trust the series to provide authoritative texts enhanced by introductions and notes by distinguished scholars and contemporary authors, as well as up-to-date translations by award-winning translators.

Tottel's Miscellany: Songs and Sonnets of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, Sir ...

Wyatt's intimate poem about lost love which begins 'They flee from me, that sometime did me seke', and Surrey's passionate sonnet 'Complaint of a lover rebuked' are joined in the miscellany by a large collection of diverse, intriguingly anonymous poems both moral and erotic, intimate and universal.

Tottel's Miscellany

Another Italian form that is Englished in the collection is the ottava rima, first introduced into England by Wyatt. The present edition seeks to offer the original book with only minor updates to enable easier reading, but offers the Tottel versions of all the poems rather than the manuscript versions where they are available, as it is important to understand the history of the reception of these poems, and that can only be achieved by having the printed versions as well as the originals, which are now widely available in excellent editions. Drawing upon a wealth of historical, textual and literary evidence, this new study recasts the Miscellany as a peculiar phenomenon of the reign of Mary I.

Tottel's Miscellany: Songs and Sonnets of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, Sir ...

The contents of the miscellany and order of the poems remained the same for subsequent editions. The major poets of Henry VIII's court, Sir Thomas Wyatt and Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, were first printed in the volume. The collection presents different types of works and thereby indicates different poetical influences and inclinations at work in the early days of the Renaissance.
