Grace (Theology of)

Bouillard in his study of St. It is this love of the Father in the image of the Son that is realized and vitally sustained by the Holy Spirit. As a quality of self-presence, sanctifying grace, once transposed into the categories derived from an intentionality analysis, becomes an awareness of the subject as subject the background awareness of self, not the subject as object.

The Idea

Lonergan's theorem of the supernatural contains both the idea that Grace transcends Nature, and the idea of a cosmic hierarchy where different orders of being are incorporated and synthesized, making the lower grades of being as vital to the higher ones in the sense they are necessary for the higher ones if the higher one is to achieve their respective tasks. This paper substantiates the argument for the necessity of such actions under reasonable assumptions. Lonergan employed the technique of introspection in his transcendental method as a means of searching for the experiential equivalents of the basic terms and relations of Scholastic metaphysics.
