Politics and citizenship on the eastern Baltic seaboard: The structuring of democratic politics from north-west Russia to Poland. This association creates an entrepreneurial nationalism that people can actively embrace as self-governing subjects in pursuit of a good life and successful career, rather than as subjects governed through state-mandated projects from above.

A Comparison of the Baltic States and the South Caucasus During the Post

A particularly bloody civil war occurred in Abkhazia but it should be noted that the region is only 10% Muslim and 20% Abkhaz and Russia had a primary role in fomenting dissent by dispatching mujahideen to fight. The problem of ethnic minority rights protection in the newly independent states.

Regime type might affect exit in the sense that all else being equal, rational, self-interested individuals will choose to migrate from an authoritarian state rather than a democratic state. These efforts are not taking place without difficulty, however. Data from interviews with potential migrants and likely permanent residents informed questions I later posed to representatives of each Russian minority population.

World Bank data discussed in Chapter 6 establish Kyrgyzstan's economy as considerably less developed than Latvia's economy, and a comparative analysis of formal policies governing majority-minority ethnic relations including those related to citizenship, language, and public-sector employment presented in Chapter 4 reveals that Kyrgyz nationalization is accommodating while Latvian nationalization is antagonistic. UNHCR is not responsible for, nor does it necessarily endorse, its content. That access or the lack thereof influences Russian perceptions of socioeconomic prospects, which then drive decisions regarding exit and voice.

Martin Müller: Market meets nationalism: making entrepreneurial state subjects in post

The article addresses the causes and possible future implications of this and several other important outcomes of the elections. This paper cannot be, and does not purport to be, either exhaustive with regard to the country surveyed, or conclusive as to the merits of any claim to refugee status or asylum. Journal of Democracy 12 2 2001.
