Ten

Almost 49 percent of all offset transactions categorized as purchases were aerospace-related. Cross-border integration within the industry continues to grow, with firms which regularly compete for sales in some sectors forming partnerships in others.

Promote Forward

Restructuring the Global Aerospace Industry: The Shifting Roles of Suppliers, A. The City continues to design capital projects to standards that minimize our greenhouse gas emissions and maximize the resiliency, redundancy, and capacity of City infrastructure to respond quickly after storms and heat waves.

RI Coordinated Public Transit & Human Services Transportation Plan

Technology transfers accounted for 13 percent of the actual value of all offset transactions, and the multiplier for technology transfers was 1. A different sampling of experts could very well result in a different conclusion.

Ten

Purchases had a multiplier of 1. The trend in offset requirements for European countries increased at an annual rate of 1. The study noted that, reminiscent of the automakers in the mid-1990s, aerospace suppliers are under increasing pressure to compete with rivals in other countries; sometimes required to move sub-tire businesses to non-traditional regions in return for large deals from prime contractors.

Offsets in defense trade.

Exports also provide additional business to many U.

Planning in an uncertain environment : a case study of gas turbine technology

For 1993-2002, the total multiplier was 1. Co-production is overseas production based upon a government-to-government agreement that permits a foreign government or producer to acquire the technical information to manufacture all or part of a U.

Promote Forward

The objective of the model is to demonstrate an approach for solving the problem, not to provide a specific answer to the problem. The input variables for the model are associated with a large degree of uncertainty, particularly due to the rapid changes in the electric industry. This report covers offset agreements and offset transactions entered into from 1993 through 2002.

RI Coordinated Public Transit & Human Services Transportation Plan

This thesis proposes a methodology for financial decision making in such an uncertain environment.
