Gauguin Self

He spent the last ten years of his life in French Polynesia, and most of his paintings from this time depict people or landscapes from that region. Oil on canvas - Museum Langmatt, Baden, Switzerland 1886 Four Breton Girls Unlike others who painted rural French subjects in the 1880s, Gauguin chose to depict four Breton girls in a field in no simple documentary, or realist manner. Shortly after he sent the work to Gauguin, however, their friendship deteriorated, and Gauguin sold it for three hundred francs.
