INDONESIA UNDER SUHARTO

The army was placed in a superior position in relation to the other services in terms of budgets, personnel, and equipment. The recently appointed Chief of the Armed Forces, General Wiranto, was a personal adjutant to President Soeharto and rose from the rank of colonel to four-star general in four years. There has also been criticism of IMF pressure for cuts to subsidies for basic consumer commodities as worsening the plight of many already impoverished Indonesians.

INDONESIA UNDER SUHARTO

Any perception on the part of the Chinese Government that the Indonesian Government was fostering or allowing animosity towards the ethnic Chinese minority in Indonesia, for example, could adversely affect relations with China.

Crisis in Indonesia: Economy, Society and Politics

A continued standoff between the IMF and the Indonesian Government would have very serious implications indeed. The transformation of Indonesian society brought about by the New Order has created new potential players clamouring for a say about the new political realities of Indonesia. In doing so it both heightened expectations and fostered resentment because economic development was matched by political liberalisation.

But the unexpected appearance of severe economic problems in Indonesia has combined with the uncertainty caused by the presidential succession to become a political and economic crisis of major proportions. Export growth was also affected by economic slowdown in Europe and Japan and by increasing US textile imports from Mexico following the signing of the North America Free Trade Agreement NAFTA.

Indonesian Politics Under Suharto: Order, Development, and Pressure for Change by Michael Vatikiotis

Paradoxically, the pressure for change has been created by the very success of the New Order in bringing about three decades of economic growth.
