The Vision; or Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise.

If living I of you did merit aught, Whate'er the measure were of that desert, When in the world my lofty strain I pour'd, Move ye not on, till one of you unfold In what clime death o'ertook him self-destroy'd. This is the specific judgment, with which the immediate remuneration is given to each one for his eternal life. Gilt top text block edge.

The Vision of Hell, Purgatory and Paradise (Dante's Poetical Works)

On what is our faith regarding the resurrection of our body founded? They all along the earth extended lay Save one, that sudden rais'd himself to sit, Soon as that way he saw us pass.

Dante Alighieri

Their punishment is to lie on the floor, face down, with their hands and feet bound together.

The Vision, or Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise of Dante Alighieri, Cary's translation of the Divine Comedy on Apple Books

Thenceforth the tribes, Who round were scatter'd, gath'ring to that place Assembled; for its strength was great, enclos'd On all parts by the fen. Each one will love the other as himself and will therefore enjoy the good of the other as of his own. As the Flemings rear Their mound, 'twixt Ghent and Bruges, to chase back The ocean, fearing his tumultuous tide That drives toward them, or the Paduans theirs Along the Brenta, to defend their towns And castles, ere the genial warmth be felt On Chiarentana's top; such were the mounds, So fram'd, though not in height or bulk to these Made equal, by the master, whosoe'er He was, that rais'd them here.
