As to why I love this book so much: Isabel and Cole! But unfortunately, she was like that until the last couple of pages, so we don't see much character growth. A fourteen-year-old girl who poisoned a fourteen-month-old baby in Brooklyn, in the summer of 1919, and who was tried in the Children's Court, was found guilty of juvenile delinquency, and committed to a home for delinquent girls.

Points of friction/The Beloved Sinner

Not embracing, but almost acknowledging that options aside from black or white, wrong or right, indeed exist. It is a cultivated taste, alien to the natural man, and unknown to childhood. And he realized what he had done.
