What is child abuse and neglect?

The typology divides violence into three broad categories according to characteristics of those committing the violent act: self-directed violence, interpersonal violence, and collective violence. This kind of ethics audit — designed to assess whether there are no, minimal, moderate, or serious confidentiality risks — is an effective way to enhance protection of all parties involved. Perpetrators within this context include fathers, mothers, step-fathers, step-mothers, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, cousins and grandparents.

Child Abuse and Neglect

Whether one should be made responsible for acts of omission in relation to climate change depends on the ethical approach taken. Sexual abuse includes noncontact behaviors, such as voyeurism or purposeful exposure to pornography, and contact behaviors, such as genital fondling and sexual intercourse.
