Raising Readers is a place where children can share an enthusiasm for stories, books and poems, and where they can sustain an interest in reading by being encouraged to respond to stories through art, music, drama and discussion. The programs aim to incorporate sport as a vehicle to help bring about positive change and social cohesion in a community desperately in need of social services. The 2015, Article 20 goes further, providing that states should ensure the effective exercise of the right to education for older persons including by promoting education and training in the use of information and communication technologies in order to bridge the digital literacy divide.

It is their belief that children must have their basic needs met in order to have improved economic opportunities and quality of life and, ultimately, to impact their community.
