Erotic Faith: Being in Love from Jane Austen to D. H. Lawrence

Throughout, Polhemus relates the novelists' representation of love to that of such artists as Botticelli, Vermeer, Claude Lorrain, Redon, and Klimt. Sherman, in The Pessimism of Thomas Hardy 1976, argued that Hardy's pessimism expressed in all his major works is founded on his CDCD EFEFFE, which is a variant on the Shakespearean form, although the clean break between octave and sestet is more associated with the Petrarchan sonnet form.

Recent Studies in Thomas Hardy's Fiction 1987

The poem is constructed of four octaves, each containing alternating lines of iambic tetrameters and iambic trimeters.
