He researched and taught at Biburg, Ingolstadt, Kassel, Ratisbon, Schaffhausen and Dillingen where he held the chair of theology. Because nearly all major natural philosophers in the seventeenth century England-Newton, Locke, Dee, Ashmole, Starkey, among others-were intensely involved in alchemy, we should be more surprised to find that Boyle was not involved in alchemical pursuits. Parliament quickly seized London, and Charles fled the capital for on 10 January, moving two days later to.
