Carcinogenicity IARC evaluated the available studies in 1987 and concluded that the limited data provide inadequate evidence of carcinogenicity in experimental animals 14. The magnitude of the effect is not large in absolute terms, is often not statistically significant and may not be of clinical significance. In very severe cases where oral hygiene is very poor and where the diet is very rich in fermentable carbohydrates, caries may cause cavities within months of tooth eruption.

On the other hand, the results of epidemiological studies in 5,800 children from 12 to 14 years old in the United States have indicated that the incidence of dental fluorosis showed linear relationship with the concentration of fluoride in drinking water at the range of 2 to 10 ppm, but there was no effect on the incidence at the level from 0. At 1000 BC, silver compounds were used as a balm for wounds and burns.
