On January 1, 1912, Sun Yat-sen was sworn in as the Interim President of the Republic of China in Nanjing and he declared the founding of the Interim Government of the Republic of China.

In Modern Chinese Political Thought Conference

It argues that analogies indeed exist but that these analogies are to be sought in the premodern or early modern stages of the development of European hermeneutics rather than in contemporary philosophical hermeneutics.

Liang Qichao

Because of the different locations of fiefs, they were scattered all over the country. The old characters may not have promoted modernisation, but they have definitely not been an obstacle to it.

Liang Qichao

In the second half of the nineteenth century, the traditional political and socio-cultural structures were not transformed during the rapid industrialisation.

Zhang Binglin

Facts occupy endless time and space; but the truth comprehending them all has no dimension; it is One. A second example was Ding Wenjiang 1887-1937 , the well-known geologist who had studied in London and had been Director-General of Greater Shanghai in the1920s.
